Free Methodist quarterly meeting at Kenyonville next Saturday and Sunday.

On the programme of the Sunday school convention for this afternoon are the following: "A Class in Theology," by Rev. Mr. Lester, of Medina; "The Two Forces," by Rev. Mr. Evans, of Lockport; recitation by Miss Anna L. Cole; "When is the beginning of our failure in holding our older Sunday school boys?" by Rev. W. B. Wagoner, of Holley; also other interesting services.

On Saturday last the First Presbyterian church of East Knollville was organized. The officers are: Ruling elders, Charles Falconer, Charles F. Ensh, A. C. Clark; board of trustees, S. A. Bates, W. D. Milne, G. T. Randall, A. C. Clark, C. T. Bush; clerk, I. B. Bates. At 2 p. m. next Sunday a Sunday-school will be organized. Rev. G. H. Galbraith is to preach at 3 o'clock.

Decoration Day.
The frequent showers last Friday did not prevent the old veterans from properly observing Decoration day. On Thursday a flag was placed at the head of each soldier's grave in Mt. Albion and Holy Cross cemeteries, and at 10 o'clock Friday morning a delegation from the G. A. R. posts visited the cemeteries and decorated the graves with a profusion of flowers which had been furnished for the occasion by the Woman's Relief Corps. The exercises at the Court House in the afternoon were very interesting. The address, "The Grand Army of the Republic," by Hon. John G. Sawyer, was a masterly effort and met with a hearty reception from the veterans. Frederic M. Thompson's address, "The Sons of Veterans," was delivered in an easy and graceful manner, showing that the speaker had given considerable study to the subject. The services were enlivened by patriotic music.

The entertainment given by the Woman's Relief Corps at Village Hall in the evening was attended by a large and well-pleased audience.

Court Notes.
When the AMERICAN went to press last Thursday morning the Ough divorce case was before the court, with closed doors. The same day a non-suit was granted against the plaintiff, Justice Lambert holding that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain a verdict. Plaintiff was allowed ninety days to prepare case on appeal. The plaintiff in this action evidently followed erroneous advice.

A non-suit was granted in the case of Caroline Vanderkar against the village of Albion.

Orson Wood, who sued the R. W. & O. railroad for damages sustained in an accident, was awarded a judgment of $2,866.

The case of Orta H. Moore against George Broadwell, et al., is dismissed. The case of Sophia Shaw against Miles Broadbent was adjourned to be heard in Buffalo, June 9.

At 7:30 Friday evening circuit court adjourned until June 9, at Buffalo.

Thanks and Apology.
The Woman's Relief Corps returns hearty thanks to the citizens of Albion and vicinity for the lavish gift of choice flowers received for Memorial day. Each of the one hundred and eleven graves had a generous supply for its decoration.

The W. R. C. Memorial committee owes to the public an apology for the confusion that unfortunately occurred in seating them at the evening exercises in the Opera House. They can only say that it was their want of experience in "hiring a hall" which they had not learned to run; the experience, however, has taught them a lesson by which they hope to profit.

LOUIS C. CRAWFORD, Corps Pres. Official.
CORR. B. BENTON, Corps Sec.

Base Ball.
A new base ball club has been organized in this village. The team is a strong one and with a little practice will be able to down any of the surrounding towns.

ALBION'S LOSS.

Death of Joseph M. Cornell. President of the Orleans Co. National Bank.

Joseph Mason Cornell died at his residence on Clinton street Friday, July 4th, 1890, at noon.

The funeral was held at the Baptist church, Monday afternoon, and was attended by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. The services were conducted by Rev. A. C. Osborn, assisted by Rev. O. F. Cain, Rev. F. S. Danham, Rev. T. Cardus and Rev. A. C. Barrell. The mortal remains were deposited in Mt. Albion, and the waru and tired body rested.

The honorary bearers were Justice Noah Davis, E. Kirke Hart, Norman S. Field, Ezra T. Coan, Charles H. Moore and George H. Sickels. The bearers were James H. Getty, William Hallock, Edwin L. Wage, Jay H. Sweet, George W. Barrell and B. Frank Morgan.

The singing, "When I can read my title clear," by Messrs. Roberts, Linton, Clark and Thurston, was particularly impressive.

Mr. Cornell was born in Galway, N. Y., June 21, 1810, coming from good old Puritan stock, through a line of ancestry known in local annals as possessing iron convictions and the courage to defend them. In 1835 the deceased came to Albion and began life's work as a clerk in the store of C. W. Swan.

In 1843, in connection with W. G. Swan, he purchased the store, and the name of Swan & Cornell soon became a part of mercantile history. Nine years afterwards Mr. Cornell commenced the more congenial life of a banker, continuing it until he laid down all his cares.

Upon the death of Eliza Hart in 1870, Mr. Cornell was made president of the Orleans County National Bank, which responsible position he held up to the time of his death. He was married April 25, 1848, to Jane Cole, who was a teacher in the Phelps Union Seminary, and by whom he had two children—J. William Cornell, teller of the Orleans County National Bank, and Mary, wife of Dr. T. B. Lewis.

Unable in early youth to secure educational advantages, for which he had a strong desire, Mr. Cornell commenced upon his arrival in Albion a systematic and well-considered course of intellectual training, which being followed brought him to a high plane of culture. Possessing broad and general information, his society was sought for and always welcomed in all circles. Surrounded by congenial friends, none were happier than he, few possessing greater tact or more loving thoughtfulness.

Politically Mr. Cornell was a staunch and unswerving Republican. Firm in his convictions of policy, it was difficult for him to accept conclusions which might force others into other channels. The limits of political ambition were proscribed by himself, for his fellow-citizens of village, county and wider sphere were always ready to entrust him to preferment.

In financial and commercial affairs Mr. Cornell was considered a safe man; cautious, conservative, reliable, his opinions and notions carried weight and influence.

In creed a Baptist, in religion the deceased was a Christian, with malice toward none. An earnest student of the accepted Word of God, the beauty and sublimity of its teachings developed the native tenderness of his heart till it filled him with that clarity for weakness of humanity which, looking over and beyond frailty, saw something to love in all.

In friendship, like the massive hills where his forefathers landed upon the continent, firm and unmovable, he clung to the friends of his youth with the love of woman. As one by one of those who started in the race of life with him "passed on," those present were drawn closer.

Happily married, it was in that inner life we all love as home, he stood pre-eminent. Affectionate, considerate, thoughtful, his presence was a benison. With unbounded hospitality all were welcomed to his gates and accorded that rare courtesy which comes from loving kindness. Wife and children to him were a precious gift to be vored in the soul as an heritage which must not be defaced, and this royal love was returned with a devotion which never wavered. To him home was not only a hope but a realization, and in the perfection of his appointments and detail, in the cordial welcome it gave, he found that rest and peace which made care and responsibility a joy.

Drawn into a Threshing Machine.

A horrible accident occurred in Carlton last Wednesday evening which resulted in the death of a young man, Morris Hayes, who was feeding a threshing machine. Barry was being threshed on the farm of Russell Clark one mile north of Lakeside, and Hayes was feeding when he was suddenly and slightly choked. Hayes attempted to loosen the grain by thrusting his right hand into the cylinder, when suddenly his arm was caught in the cogs and he was drawn in before the other workmen present could realize what had happened. The engineer reversed the engine, and the top of the cylinder was removed and a most ghastly spectacle was presented. The right arm of Hayes was torn into shreds and the entire head was mangled to jelly. Death had been instantaneous. The body was taken out and removed to the young man's home a few miles north of Kenyonville. Hayes was 27 years of age, unmarried, and lived with his father and mother. The accident was witnessed by upwards of a dozen men.

A Great Change Has Occurred.

There is not half the drunkenness in Albion now that there was ten years ago. Perhaps you have noticed it. This is accounted for in part by the fact that the habitual drinkers here by the quantity more than they once did, and consume the liquor or beer at home. It is also a fact that most of the dealers are more careful about their sales and do not allow patrons to imbibe to excess. Police Justice Eddy says the first six months of this year there is 25 this means a saving of about $200 to the town. There is a very close connection between drunkenness and taxation and the people will be glad to learn that there is a change for the better in Albion.

Of Course Not.

It is not the clothes which make the man, but how they do help. The art of dressing well plays no small part in civilized life. Clothing may be stylish and elegant, adapted to the wants of every wearer, without being extravagant. It is not vanity, but simply self-respect, to dress well and to wear such garments as are decreed by the best taste and skill of the times. It is a well-known fact that in order to wear good clothes and get the proper styles in garments, you have to buy your clothing, and to purchase it at prices less than those charged for inferior goods by other retailers. You will be well repaid by visiting Dry & Fox, 71 Main street. Large stock of warm winter goods now in.

Albion is Just the Place.

George Sandrock, one of the members of the Western House of Refuge Commission, has been interviewed by the Enquirer in regard to the recent and prospective movements of the commission. Mr. Sandrock among other things said that "it would be preferable to have the Home located near one of the large cities as they will attract more attention to the retreat than would a small town." This is one of the good points claimed for Albion as a site for the institution—it is located conveniently for Rochester and Buffalo, and it is one of the most desirable of the Home will naturally come.

Knowlesville Burglars Located.

The men who burglarized the store of W. G. Hood at Knowlesville two or three weeks ago have been found in the Batavia jail, where they are held for a like crime committed in that town. On one of the jailed burglars was found a wrapper with on the other a pair of trousers and an outing shirt, the goods being identified by Mr. Hood as having been stolen from him. If the thieves should get el at in Genesee county they would be liable over to the Orleans county authorities.

Men Who are Willing.

Republican candidates are now up and at it. The Herald says Wm. H. Rogers and Wm. Luttonette of Barre and Frank Van Epps of Carlton want to be superintendents of the poor. For county treasurer it names as candidates J. J. Wall and B. T. Coan of Albion, S. W. Smith and Daniel Frisbie of Gaines. The aspirants for school commissioner are J. H. Aker of Knowlesville, Edward Posen of Medina and E. O. Smith of Kendall, and for member of assembly are Mrs. H. H. Knowles and Adelbert McCormick of Medina.

A Musician's Testimony.

We have recently purchased of Prof. W. M. Smith, our well known teacher of music and dealer in musical instruments, an Ivers & Pott upright piano with the soft stop attachment and automatic desk front and fall. It is the second piano of that manufacture we have had, and as they have given entire satisfaction we would heartily commend them to any who are contemplating purchasing.

Wm. H. JENNE, FARMER.

The Grand Opera House.

Both gas and electricity will be used for lighting the house. The opening entertainment will be given by the new company. They will have an opportunity to pass judgment upon Manager Foster's good taste in fitting up Albion's first opera house.

One woman was considerably injured by being kicked in the stomach by a drunken brute.

"Why is it," asks an exchange, "that when a person returns from a vacation and meets one of his old friends the most natural remark that pops into his friend's head is: 'Well, so you've got back again, have you?' Could any salutation be more absurd? If the tourist had not returned he surely would not be there to be greeted, but this mistake is made by nine out of ten people--and they mean nothing by it nor think for the moment that they are asking a silly question. Let the above greeting be placed on the dead-file with: 'Is it hot enough for you?'"

The burglars told the Albion men where about one hundred dollars worth of stolen property had been concealed, and the officers were then released.

A Coming Attraction.

Speaking of "Fabio Romani," the spectacular drama soon to be presented at the new Grand Opera House in this place, the New Orleans Times-Democrat of a recent date says: "With such a plot and such a chance for good spectacular staging, it is not surprising that the play places the average theater goer, although it brings out with clear distinctness the very worst side of a very bad woman, and was evidently written by the most cynical of cynics. The play is splendidly mounted, the scenery fine and the costumes elegant. The company is decidedly good. In the last act the scenery, showing the picturesque bay of Naples and Mount Vesuvius with its interesting surroundings was particularly effective and called for and received enthusiastic applause." Although the above attraction is playing to crowded houses in the large cities, Manager Foster has succeeded in securing it and it will be presented here in its entirety.

Anent the Fair.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE COUNTY AND VILLAGE.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 7, 1904.

Chicago's Holocaust.

Last Wednesday afternoon when the AMERICAN was going to press the new Iroquois Theater at Chicago was destroyed by fire. It was said to be one of the handsomest and most complete playhouses in the country. Nearly six hundred persons, mostly women and children, were lost. It was one of the worst disasters of the kind that the world has ever known. The details of this awful horror are now well known; and the sympathy of the whole country as well as foreign lands will go out to Chicago in this sudden and terrible affliction.

It is impossible to describe the grief of those who have lost their wives and children on account of this "monumental catastrophe." It has already been stated that the burning of the Iroquois Theater and the terrible scenes witnessed will stand unparalleled in American records. Had everything about the theater including the appliances for guarding against fire been in proper order the loss of life would not have been so great. The fire interrupted the first performance ever given in the house. It was no doubt, according to latest reports, caused by defects in the electric wiring. If the asbestos drop curtain had been lowered, fire escapes in proper condition, the fire alarm system in order and those in charge familiar with the exits, many human beings might have been saved. The theater was not completed and it should not have been used until the exits, curtains and everything about the building was in working order.

At midnight Saturday W. J. Davis and Harry J. Powers, proprietors and managers of the Iroquois Theater and George Williams, city building inspector, had been placed under arrest on the criminal charge of manslaughter. They have been held to bail in the amount of $10,000 each. Those who are to blame for this awful disaster ought to be made to suffer the consequences. Since this fire which was almost as bad as the burning of the Ring Theater, in Vienna, in 1881, when about 900 persons perished in the flames. Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, has ordered nineteen theaters closed because they had no asbestos curtains. If that same order was given in every city and village throughout the country for the protection of those who visit theaters, opera houses and halls, and thus prevent another similar disaster, it would be most heartily endorsed. Those who attend public entertainments cannot be too carefully guarded against fire. This awful horror ought to be a lesson to every manager of a playhouse throughout the country.

And now the management of the St. Louis Exposition wants to borrow $4,500,000 from the government in order to complete the work now in progress. Congress gave St. Louis $5,000,000 for the exposition last winter. Our government will probably not make another loan, unless it gets "gift edge" security.

The celebrated Medina sandstone, underlies nearly all that area between the Niagara limestone terrace and Lake Ontario. This formation was so named because it was best shown at Medina, along the shores of Oak Orchard creek, where it was first discovered and utilized for building and other purposes. It seems to be divided into four different bands, the most valuable rock being found from five to thirty feet below the surface. It is characterized by its extreme hardness, compared to similar substances, and by contractors and builders is regarded as one of the best varieties of stone found and utilized in the United States for building purposes. It is devoid of any granite qualities however, is easily cut and fashioned into the most artistic of architectural shapes, and for durability it surpasses the average building stone, the action of climatic changes having little influence upon its disintegration. It can be hewed and split, will not crack or break like limestone, and does not wear smooth and slippery like granite. It is usually found in layers of from one inch to four feet in thickness and varies in color from a light gray to a deep or brownish red. Naturally rich in beauty, which is enhanced by the artistic conception of the architect or designer it is susceptible of a variety of uses and unexcelled for archirequired public hearing on the spending proposal in November. The efforts of the Taxpayers Association will likely be much more beneficial to the taxpayers and legislators alike by having the group involved in the budget process right from the start. Now is the time when the decisions are being made as to what funding the many county departments and programs will be getting in 1989, not in November.

Taking aim at reducing the tax burden on area residents, Association representatives put a number of challenging proposals before the Legislature. Those proposals included a call for no increase in the tax levy this year, a county hiring freeze, a review of the organization of county government, a review of state and federal programs before adoption and no acceptance of such programs if they reflect an increase in taxes.

We are confident that county Legislators share with the Taxpayers Association the same concerns

As a watchdog organization, the Taxpayers Association has the potential to provide a very valuable service to both taxpayers and legislators in providing positive input, comment and criticism during the budget preparation process, which will be going on for the next couple of months. It is good to see that legislative leaders and county department heads will be meeting with the Taxpayers Association to discuss the upcoming budget.

Governments on the local, state and federal levels, after all, need to have such a watchdog organization on the job in order to insure that legislators and government officials are being held accountable for their decisions and actions. The taxpayers have every right to know where their money is being spent and why. Locally, if it strives to be fair and accurate, the Taxpayers Association can play a most important role in keeping the county government accountable and the taxpayers informed.

No. 261—The Pratt Block
Before the Pratt Block at 118-120 North Main existed, the lot was occupied by the English Block. Myron J. English (1824-1872) bought the existing brick building with Henry A. Griswold (1833-1889) in 1867. On December 9, 1868, English made a will leaving the majority of his estate and the farm to his wife Esther (1826-1881) and his children Libbie J. (1851-1890), Charles N. (1852-1881), and William H. (1854-1907). An interesting bequest was that $250 each should be set aside for Thomas Parker and Henry A. Griswold to buy gold watches which would be inscribed as a gift from Myron J. English. I assume that English made this will become because he was suffering from heart trouble.

Two days later, on December 11, 1868, Myron English bought out his partner Henry A. Griswold's share in the English Block. Sometime later English cancelled the bequest of a gold watch to Griswold. Did the former partners have a falling out?

In 1870 English tore down the old brick building and built a modern brick block. At this same time he built his ostentatious brick Italian villa at 228 North Main. He died of heart disease in September 1872, age 49. The three children inherited a business block in Chicago and the English Block in Albion. Libbie had married S.B. Hibben and lived in Chicago, presumably where her husband occupied the English Block. Four years later, on September 20, 1877, William and his wife Nettie, sold their interest in these properties to Nettie and Charles.

Charles English married Sarah Pratt (1853-1885), the only child of John and Hannah A. Pratt. John Pratt was an entrepreneur in Calton who built the ornate Italian villa now occupied by LeRoy Bannister. The fortunes of the English family continued downhill. Charles English contracted an inflammation of the bowels and died on April 27, 1881, age 29. The day before he died his wife's father, John Pratt, bought the shares of the English Block from the rest of the English family. This may have been to secure title for his daughter. Then on December 17, 1881, John Pratt bought the remaining interest in the English Block from his son-in-law's estate for $300.

The English Block was a good building, only 11 years old, in a good location. The two stores and the second floor offices were leased. However, John Pratt enjoyed the building only two months before it was destroyed in the fire of Friday, September 13, 1882, which wiped out all of the buildings on Main between Beaver Alley and Bank Street. John Pratt immediately cleared away the brick rubble and built the famous Pratt Block which exists today.

The Pratt Block was three stories high with two store on the ground floor. A grand central staircase lead to the second floor where there were offices. The third floor was unfinished. In the vacant third floor John Pratt planned to build the grandest Opera House that Albion had ever seen.

John Pratt's plans were interrupted when his only child, Sarah, died, a widow and childless, in November 1885. John Pratt now had no children to inherit his vast holdings. He began plans to leave his property to his nieces and nephews.

Next week, the Pratt Opera House.

Oldtimer's Sports Reunion

Did you know that you can make new friends in three months by becoming interested in other people? You can in two years by trying to become other people interested in you?

This correspondent has had this experience in the past and now organizing a super sports shindig for the residents in Orleans and Genesee counties and also for Monroe County. I have found out that I met a few interesting people who have a lot of reasons why they should attend this affair and why they shouldn't. In the future, I'll write a column on the problems and what has happened to the older breed in Orleans County.

Joe Morien, Medina, and Henry McNamara, Albion, will represent Orleans County at the reunion.

Really, those national conventions are getting this reporter down a little. It seems like they are spending a lot of money and it does accomplish very little. It seems like they are having a hard time on our tax dollars.

A couple of notes — Common, Dan Quayle, you joined the Guard to avoid Vietnam. I think we all know this so you beat around the bush. It is nothing to be ashamed about. We all try and get away with things to some degree. No one's perfect. Quayle would be a better man if he came right out and said it. Now I don't know what to believe.

On the other side of the fence — For any other governor, it would have been a minor flap over the state budget. But nothing is routine anymore for Michael Dukakis, especially when it lowers Republicans to snicker at his much touted "Massachusetts Miracle". The Duke was forced to concede that sagging tax revenues have his $1.6 billion 1988 budget out of balance by more than $600 million, with additional red ink forecast.

No. 262—The Pratt Block

John Pratt (1816-1902) took over the English Block at 118-120 North Main Street in 1881, probably to protect the interests of his only child, Sarah English (1853-1885), after the death of her husband, Charles N. English (1852-1881). When the English Block burned in the great fire of February 13, 1882, John Pratt, along with many other property owners, immediately rebuilt in modern style. This may seem a brave act for a man 66 years old, but the property was valuable. When Sarah died in 1885, childless, John did not give up but continued to improve his property. The Pratt Block was built with a wide central staircase to handle the crowds in the proposed opera house on the third floor of the block. Finally in 1890 the third floor was finished and the "Grand Opera House" opened.

In the 1800s every village had some sort of public hall where lectures could be given, plays performed, and variety shows given. In 1860 Roswell Burrows bought the Baptist Church (where the Odd Fellows later built their hall) and converted it into a concert hall. Civil War rallies were held here. When the Boardwell Block was opened in 1862, where the Newberry's store is now located, it had a small meeting room, used by lodges, and a large meeting room, where Tom Thumb and Buffalo Bill graced the stage. In 1874 Boardwell Hall was superseded by the "Opera House" in the village hall. This opera house is still visible on the second floor at the village hall. Now, 16 years later Albion for the first time in her history had "a comfortable, commodious and handsome amusement hall."

The opera house was established by H.A. Foster, of Erie, Pennsylvania. Work began on June 2, 1890, from plans drawn by Leon H. Lempert, of Rochester, who also painted the scenery. Mr. Lempert had built seven theaters in 1889 and proclaimed that the Grand Opera House was the best of the lot. The walls and ceiling were frescoed. The main floor seated 400 on padded folding chairs. There were four private boxes, two on each side of the stage. The dressing room were under the stage. The stage was lit with gas while the rest of the house was lit with electricity. Although the stage was not deep, the profusion of scenery made up for the lack.

The grand opening was Monday, September 1, when Tommy Russell

Company presented E.H. House's dramatization of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper." Tommy Russell was a famous young actor who had made a name for himself the previous year playing Little Lord Fauntleroy.

There was a new orchestra for the opening, consisting of Prof. Porter, leader and first violin, Wells Porter second violin, Charles Clark flute, H. Brakeman cornet, Danley Webster trombone, L.E. Griswold bass viol, Allie Franklin pianist, and A.L. Briggs drum and bells.

The opening received a rave review from the "Orleans American." "The elaborate costumes and mounting necessary for historical realism were very fine, and must make the beautiful play one of the most expensive of the season. The house was completely filled with an enthusiastic audience, all uniting in congratulating Manager Foster on securing so great an attraction for the opening night.

"The amusement loving people of this village are deeply indebted to Mr. Foster for placing such an elegant house at their disposal. Many who viewed the interior for the first time at the opening were astonished to find that Albion contained so complete and artistic a play-house, and we doubt if there is another village of this size in the state that can boast of anything in that direction to equal our new Grand Opera House."

Next week, the Pratt Block becomes part of Landauers.

No. 263—The Pratt Block

When John Pratt died on December 31, 1901, he left his large land holdings to his wife and her brothers and to his seven siblings and their children.
John H. Pratt, the son of Winslow
Pratt, eldest of John Pratt's brothers, received control of the Pratt Block
(118-120 North Main). John H. Pratt
(1846-1926) was the father of Florence Pratt James and J. Howard Pratt, long-time Gaines Historian. On March 15, 1915, John H. Pratt and Mary E.

Britt Pratt (1852-1940) sold the Pratt
Block to Stephen N. Pratt. Stephen N.
Pratt died in early 1920 and the block passed to his wife, Mary Esther Pratt.
Their children, Charles M. Pratt and Lena M. Hooker, inherited the Pratt
Block. On February 16, 1946, Mary
Esther Pratt's heirs sold the Pratt Block to Lester V. Sullivan for $10,000.

Lester V. Sullivan (1898-1953) was a veteran of World War I and was a partner for many years with Herman Neuremburg in Sammett's clothing store, which was located at 118 North Main (now the Shenandoah Bridal Shop). He was a village trustee for two terms, declining renomination in 1948. He was commander of the Sheret Post of the American Legion in 1933-34 and an organizing member of the post band in 1930, acting as its business manager and traveling with it to national legion conventions. He died at his desk at Sammett's on December 19, 1953.

Sabra Hill Sullivan (1899-1985) was born in Knowlesville. She was a member of the Sheret Post Auxiliary, the Albion Business and Professional Women, the First Church of Christ,
Scientist—Boston, and Dogwood
Twig of the Arnold Grégory Memorial Hospital. The Sullivans had one child,
Arnold. Sabra Sullivan died in May,
1985.

On April 23, 1964, Sabra Hill Sullivan sold the Pratt Block to Laundauer's. The further history of this block is discussed in my column on the
F.A. Day Block (No. 253, July 13, 1988).
